Course Description:

This class is intended for any officer/agent who conducts law enforcement actions in California. The search and seizure laws are under attack in the courts and by our legislature! Over the past few years, the courts have rendered several decisions regarding search and seizure that have had a major impact on law enforcement particularly affecting those officers on patrol. Starting in 2016, the California legislature has further changed the scope law enforcement's ability to search electronic media devices and service provider records (including social media) under the new Electronic Communication Privacy Act,. Law Enforcement needs to know the changes, get back to the basics, and adapt to these changes. This course will focus on the legal challenges law enforcement faces in the field when it comes to arrests, detentions, and searches resulting from a variety contacts. Writing search war- rants will also be addressed along with recent court decisions impacting warrants, the content, and necessity for warrants in certain situations.

Instructor:

Tia Quick has been a DDA for 26 years and is currently assigned to the Law Enforcement Liaison position at SDPD. Tia is also the recent winner of the prestigious 2016 CNOA State Prosecutor of the Year. She was recently transferred from the Major Narcotics Unit where she worked specifically on Informant issues, search warrants, and complex narcotics cases. Prior to that, She worked eight years as the law enforcement liaison at SDPD and has also served in the JUDGE unit, GANG unit and the Superior Court unit during her time as a DDA. For the past thirteen years, the focus of her job has been the reviewing of search warrants, updating officers on the law regarding search and seizure as well as help- ing maintain a positive relationship between police agencies and the DA's Office. Tia is a lead instructor for CNOA on Legal Updates/Search and Seizure and teaches throughout the state for local, state and federal law enforcement.

Location:

Sheriff's Posse Grounds, 395 Natividad Road, Salinas, CA 93906
